i am in a minority in this, as i am sure you are already aware: i am a hardcore futurama fan. i watched the entire series in five days at a friend's house, and have been a fan ever since. i was 13 when it ended in 1999, i was 13 when i watched the new series in 2006, and i was 13 when the new series started in 2013. i have seen all the movies that are out so far. to me, the farnsworth invention is the best of the bunch. all the movies stand out, but i love the episode "pizza from space". the show is also a satire of the genre of sci-fi movies. it's not quite parody, but it has that element of absurdism. there are no real rules to writing for this show, and the writers can come up with any premise they want. so it's a very open-ended show. can a movie be called a movie only when it's been screened in a multiplex or a theatre? if that's the case then how does it make sense to screen a film in an independent cinema, where all we have is a projectionist and a bar that serves tea and snacks? and here i am not talking about the multiplexes but the independents too. why can't the makers of futurama produce a dvd and screen it for years and years? i am sure that thousands of their regular viewers have already purchased the dvd or the season pass and would be willing to pay a bit more for the same experience. i am sure that the movie will be loved by all the old school fans of the show. i am sure it will attract the younger viewers too. now that i have reminded you about futurama let me tell you about the other miracle that's happening. the other miracle that's happening is the release of the ram leela movie. this is a story of a simple and a poor girl who is filled with desires and dreams but has no way to fulfil them. she ends up in the city of dreams where she meets a handsome devil who turns out to be more than just a devil. she is happy but the devil is not and he wants to kill her. a tragedy befalls her that she may never recover from. what happens next changes the course of her life forever.
