The world is just a concept we invented because it was fun. People pretend to be ships and airplanes and buses and houses and dogs. We pretend that these people exist in the world, and we have this fun interaction where you give us money and we take you to these pretend places. And then the internet is the same. We invent it because it was fun. We pretend to be people. We have pretend jobs. We pretend to be programmers and scientists. We pretend to be presidents and authors. But that's all just an online game we play. We're not really people. We're just people who pretend to be other people. We're just people who pretend to be something else. Robot Actions: The only difference between the world and the internet is the people. Jon Stewart: Everything you knew about government and politics is wrong. You don't understand how government works. Our president is not actually the president of the United States. And neither is the president of the United States the president of the United States. The president is the president of the Internet, and the Internet is a series of computers connected to each other with no central authority. All authority on the Internet comes from the KeyMacro is a free software application to automatically record all website accesses. You can use it with a web browser or with a set of programs, in order to get readymade recordings that you can edit and use later. The application records all the URLs you visit, and is able to detect web addresses in different web browsers as well as programs, such as the Windows explorer, Outlook Express, Internet Explorer, Opera, Netscape, Internet Explorer 5, Google Chrome, Netscape 9, Mozilla Firefox, Epiphany, Opera 9, or iTunes. If the web browser can detect URLs, it lets the program recognize them, and if the URL is detected in a program, you can just click the right mouse button and the URL will be automatically recorded. For Chrome and Opera, you can use the option "Press shift and right click to capture the URL". The URL recording will be saved as a tab in the application main window. You can sort the saved URLs by time, date or name. You can also highlight a whole bunch of URLs with just one click. You can open them as a document, delete the URL or export the URL list as a TXT file. When you want to stop recording the URLs, just click the "Stop" button. The program will then update the list and show it in the application window. You can also use a handy keyboard short cut to record all your web activities. In the "Options" tab, you can configure most of the program's options. Here, you can change the color of the toolbar and the buttons, add buttons or check boxes to the toolbar, add shortcuts to the Start menu, increase or decrease the characters to be saved with each recording, change the Start and Stop buttons' image, change the toolbar color, and many other options. Other Features: The software can detect URLs in different web browsers and programs and can record them with various options. The URL recording is saved as a tab in the application window. Manage your link collection in an easy and convenient way. Realms of Dreaming: The Hidden Worlds of the Artist, Sufjan Stevens, Simon & Schuster, 2007. Mitch Horowitz is an author and creative-writing instructor who has taught at the Writing Seminars of Carleton University in Ottawa. He is currently a freelance writer and novelist living in Toronto, Canada. At the invitation of Simon & Schuster Canada, Mitch Horwitz conducted an in-depth interview with the critically acclaimed and internationally acclaimed singer and songwriter, Sufjan Stevens. For the last few years, Stevens has been pushing the boundaries of contemporary music with his artful and dynamic music. The artist's musical work is inspired by a variety of sources including his personal life, his interest in mythology and history, and his lifelong passion for the literature of the nineteenth century. The resulting music is marked by complex orchestration, epic poetry, and often complex, polyphonic structures. With the release of his album Age of Adz, Stevens has announced his first solo departure from the shoegaze sound on which much of his earlier work was based. Since its release, the album has received wide critical acclaim and has been nominated for a slew of awards. Stevens invited Horowitz to his home in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, where he allowed the author to accompany him and his band as they played a selection of his solo work. The author also met with the artist at his studio in Brooklyn, New York. The author's articles and essays appear in a number of publications, including the Saturday Night Review, The Globe and Mail, and the Washington Post.
